I have written here and said often that you can't stop an idea.

A letter late last week (See Letters, Page 2) confirmed for the second time this year that an idea, a real idea grows and brings on important studies which in this day are prelude to major change.

This question has to do with a proposal begun almost three years ago on a national readership study of public notice and now has gained national support of another segment of the newspaper industry.

The other idea is acknowledgment by a major Texas university by plan to incorporate computerization in print media education sequences. And this idea has been brought to the attention of every university and college journalism school and department in Texas.

NOW-NOW-NOW

It has been difficult for people in this area to understand what practical results might come from the experimenting we have written and talked about going on in our own Herald.

And perhaps results yet are a few years away. But whatever comes of computerization or readership work we've tried here, I know the ideas have indeed gone far. And they did not emanate from universities, where perhaps they should, but from outside the metro areas, not in California, not in New York, not in some think tank, but in Texas.

I suppose owning this newspaper may be more impressive to people but this "something new" that comes from it will serve readers or viewers or communicators of the future.

We also intend to prove some of the things further, but with the exception of the very best fortune in one other element of my life, I don't imagine it could be a better professional year.

And I've been fortunate enough to have a few good ones.

Area Roundup

Busing Complicates School Days

WACO

Monday morning busing will become a reality for many students in the Waco School District. County School Supt. Joe Hatcher, who is handling the busing, said the first runs will be at 7:15 a.m., second runs at 7:45 and third runs at 8:15. Hatcher is receiving about 200 phone inquiries daily from parents wanting to know about bus routes. Fifteen drivers left Waco Wednesday morning at 4 a. m. in a school bus to go to Mississippi and pick up 13 new buses for the district.

Dogs Curbed By New Ordinance

ROCKDALE

Rockdale city councilmen gave unanimous approval to a city leash law which prohibits dogs from running loose within the city limits. Passage of the ordinance capped more than a year of discussions on the dog issue by councilmen who have frequently listened to citizens complain about stray dogs overturning garbage cans and otherwise being nuisances. Last April, city voters favored a leash law in a referendum held with the annual city elections.

Flames Threaten Gas Tanks

GEORGETOWN

A pre-dawn explosion rocked the Sigmor Shamrock Service Station on US 81 south of town as fire swept through the station for the second time this year. Overflowing of the tanks and the spillage flowing to a frayed extension cord on the ground caused an explosion that blew out the front of the building, ruptured the drink cooler where the extension cord led, and ran flames around the storage tanks. Quick response by the fire department averted a disaster by keeping flames down and away from the dangerous above ground tanks.

Engine Collision Injures Two

MCGREGOR

Two men were injured as four engines tumbled from the tracks when two Santa Fe freight trains sideswiped in downtown Moody. The accident occurred when the long freight train was passing through, and another freight was waiting on the side track. Both were headed south, and the waiting freight started up and angled into the passing freight just as the engines were passing.

Huge Center To Be Built

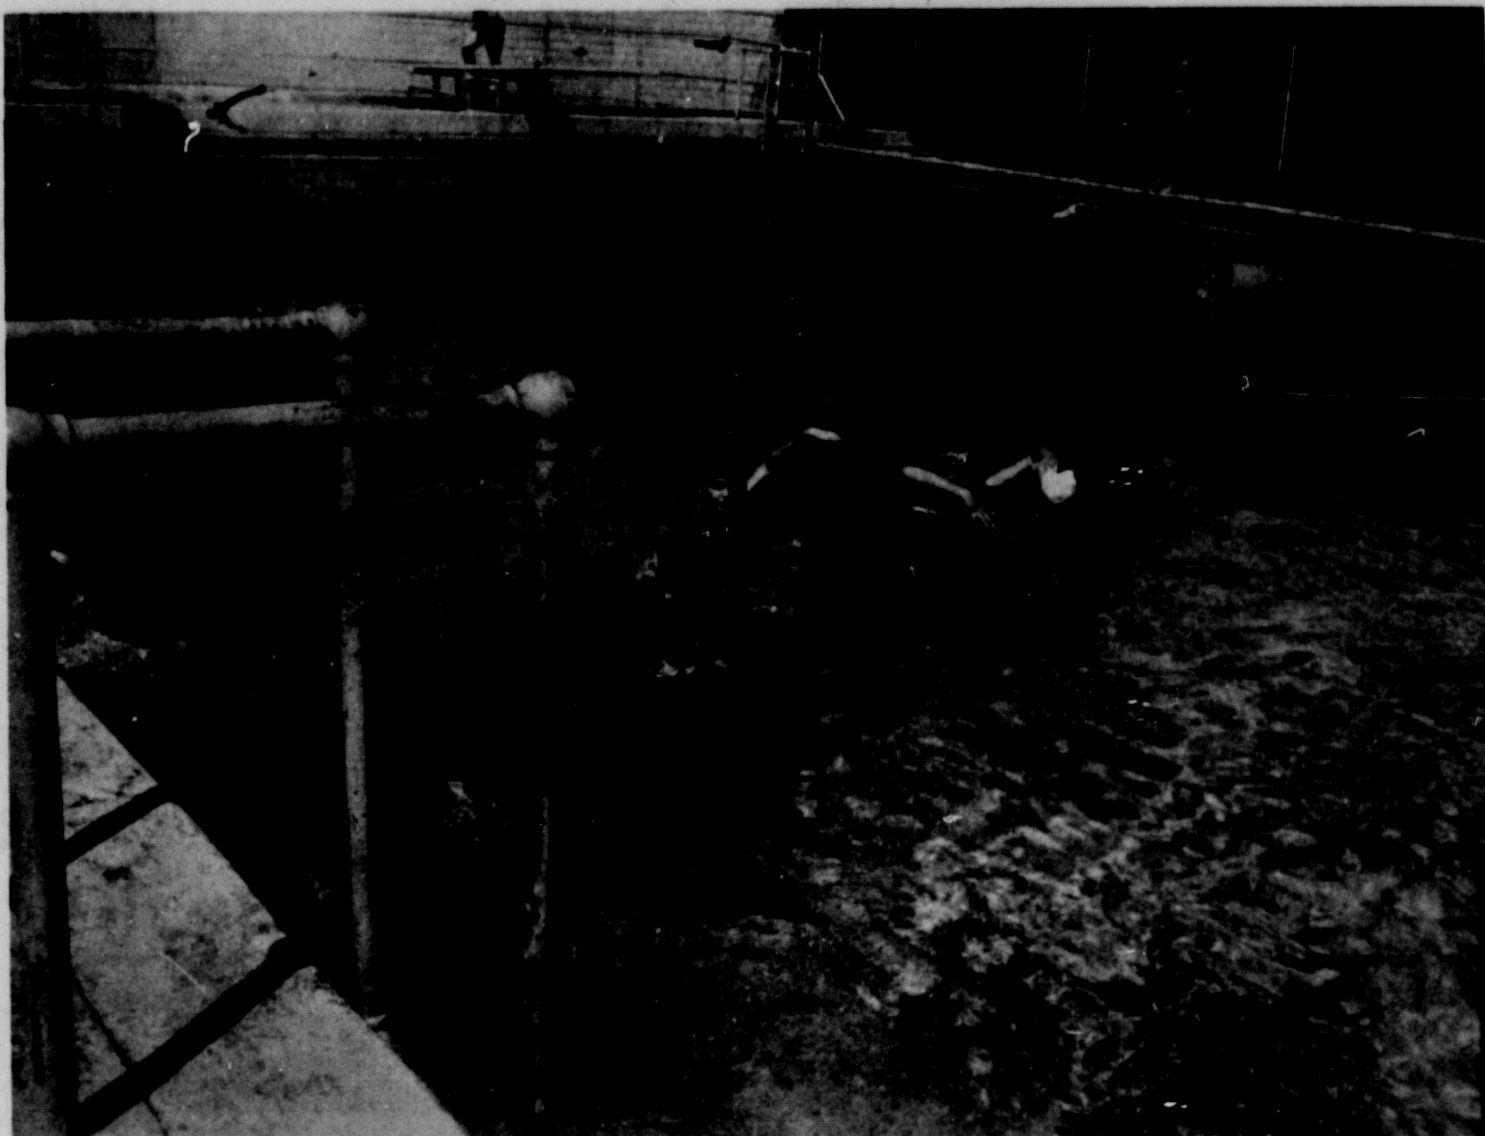

BELTON

Bel County's worst-kept industrial secret surfaced Tuesday. Western Auto Supply Co. is coming to town. The town will be Temple officially, although the huge new distribution center will be at almost dead center of the Belton-Temple complex and the economic shock waves will be widespread. The site selected is a 64-acre area north across Interstate 35 from the Towne and Country Shopping Center. The building will be 600,000 square feet. The business will be in operation by late fall of 1974.

3,000 Honor Two Congressmen

TEMPLE

The 24-year-old 10th Congressional District barbecue at Wilson Fox's ranch was expanded Thursday night to include the 11th Congressional District as more than 3,000 Central Texas stars honored two of the most influential members of Congress, U. S. Rep. W. R. (Bob) Poage of Waco and the 11th District and U. S. Rep. J. J. (Jake) Pickle of Austin and the 10th District stood in a receiving line more than two hours in a pecan grove on the San Gabriel River northeast of Taylor to shake hands with each of the guests. The one-pound T-bon steaks always served were victims of the meat shortage. The menu included barbecued brisket, however.

PERFECT ANTIDOTE to 100 degree weather is enjoyed by last-minute swimmers at the public pool, which closed Sunday. School days will replace the lazy days of summer, drawing to a close in nearly unbearable heat and dry weather.

Service Held For Judge O. D. Graham

O. D. Graham, district judge in Cameron for ten years, died Tuesday August 21 at St. Edward Hospital after an illness of several months.

Funeral service was held Thursday morning at Marek-Burns-Laywell Funeral Home, the Rev. J. Lee Scott, pastor of the First Christian Church, officiating. Burial was in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Judge Graham was born November 22, 1884, to A. L. and Rebecca Hurt Graham in their farm home between Milano and Caldwell. In 1909 he graduated from Sam Houston University in Huntsville and taught school for a short time.

In 1913 he was graduated from The University of Texas Law School and began the practice of law. He practiced in Thorndale for 35 years. While in Thorndale he was a civic leader and for many years and a member of the local school board. He also served for some years as a member and chairman of the County School Board.

He was a member of the First Christian Church and served as dean, elder, Sunday School superintendent, secretary and treasurer of the board. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge in which he held a life membership.

Patrol Reports July Accidents

The Texas Highway Patrol investigated 22 accidents on highways in Milam County during the month of July, according to Fred Hurst, Highway Patrol supervisor of this area.

The accidents resulted in no deaths and seven injuries in July.

These figures result in a total of 146 accidents with no deaths and 65 injured in Milam County during 1973.

Cattle Prices Show Drop, Hogs Still High

Feeder cattle at Cameron Livestock Auction showed a drop in prices Thursday, with receipts normal compared to this time last year. However, slaughter cows were steady, along with cow and calf pairs. Prices are still quite a bit higher than they were last year.

The biggest price drop was seen in feeder steers and steer calves which were mostly $5 per cwt. lower, according to the auction report. Feeder heifers were $2 lower. The run of some 815 cattle and calves included around 12 percent slaughter cows and bulls, with the remainder mostly feeder cattle and calves.

But hog prices are nearly double what they were selling for last August, according to the report.

Barrows and gilts that sold for $28 last August brought $52 to $53.10 Thursday. Sows were $44 to $47.75 compared with $21.20 to $24.40 last year.

Cow and calf pairs are higher than they were last year, with choice bringing $475 to $550 and good bringing $425 to $525. Even aged good brought $350 to $400. Pairs were selling for $265 to $340 for good and $337 to $380 for choice last August.

Dig Revealing Ancient Secrets

By Colin Bickler

TEL APHEK, Israel
Reuter -- A huge mound of earth on this ancient strategic point is slowly giving up secrets of an apparently unbroken chain of urban living dating back at least 5,000 years.

American Christians and Israeli Jews are working side by side in the painstaking job of uncovering layer after layer of civilization, building up a picture not unlike the American author James Michener's historical novel, "The Source."

That book traced the history of Israel in fictional form, based on the findings at an imaginary archaeological dig. At Tel Aphek, fact is proving not only stranger than fiction but more exciting.

Here, where the biblical armies of Joshua conquered the Canaanites, where the Philistines waged war on the house of Israel under King Saul, where the Christian apostle Paul rested on his way between Jerusalem and Caesarea, the archaeologists are finding enough basic material to keep them occupied for a lifetime.

All this, on the edge of modern Israel's most densely populated urban area, 10 miles west of Tel Aviv.

"We have a site here with all the urban history of Palestine. There appear to be no gaps since the beginning of urban civilization around 3,000 B. C.," the head of Tel Aviv's archaeological department, Dr. Moshe Kochavi, said in an interview.

One of the most unusual and controversial features of the 30-acre site, first recognized earlier this century by the American orientalist, Professor W. F. Albright, as the biblical Achek, is a continual chain of walled cities dating back to at least 3,000 B. C. -- the early Bronze Age.

According to Kochavi, until now there has usually been a break in the continuation of walled cities of ancient Palestine about the early part of the middle east Bronze Age period -- when the population was largely nomadic -- though such continuing settlement is known further north in Lebanon and Syria.

"Here, starting around 3,000 B. C. urban civilization appears to continue without interruption until modern times, but particularly interesting is the continuation from the third millennium through to the second on a site which is among the top 10 discoveries in this part of the world," Kochavi said.

He and his group of students have already found in part of the site what appear to be homes of people of the early Bronze Age. Nearby are remnants of a columned public building, possibly a palace, from the time of the biblical patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

FHA Loan Program Available

Applications for rural housing loans, with interest credit, are being accepted by the Farmers Home Administration in Cameron. This program, suspended in January, 1973, has been reinstated and will be administered in the same manner as it was before, according to Henry Ivey, FHA supervisor.

Applicants whose requests for loans were rejected earlier because of the suspension of the program may re-apply, if still interested, and will be reconsidered by the Farmers Home Administration county committee. If eligibility requirements are met the loans may be approved.

Prior to suspension of the interest credit program on January 8, some 67 rural housing loans, with the interest credit feature, were made in Milam County, Ivey said.

A rural housing loan with interest credit means that low income people may secure government assistance on interest charges made on their loan principal balance.

Assistance is given according to current income and family need and may be up to an amount equal to 6 1/4 percent, thus reducing the amount of interest paid by the borrower down to one percent.

In determining eligibility, for interest credits, annual gross income, verified by the employer, is reduced five percent plus $300 for each child living at home and under 21. This adjusted income is then used as part of a formula to determine the amount of interest credit that the housing borrower is entitled to.

"This program, designed for low income families, will help provide decent and sanitary housing for families who could not afford it otherwise," Ivey said.

Parsons In Line For State Award

John W. Parsons, of Cameron, has been named one of six Texas Highway Department maintenance construction supervisors selected as finalists in the 1973 Lady Bird Johnson Award for Highway Beautification.

The former First Lady established the award four years ago to recognize the Highway Department maintenance man who does the best job of highway beautification in his area.

Prizes consist of appropriate plaques and cash awards of $1,000 for the first place winner and $500 for the runnerup. Mrs. Johnson will present the awards in a special ceremony October 11 at Lyndon B. Johnson State Park near Stonewall.

New Political Tides?

Could it be a bit of nostalgia surfaced at an enormous barbecue for Congressmen J. J. Pickle and W. R. Poage the other day?

The well-wooded grounds of the Fox Riverside Ranch have been site for political conclaves like the Pickle-Poage honorarium for years.

Yet someone said the grounds might well be under water in a year with construction underway on the new Laneport Dam.

And Cong. Pickle introduced the 11th District Congressman as the new representative for that part of Williamson County east of San Gabriel River. And the 11th District has gained five new counties altogether.

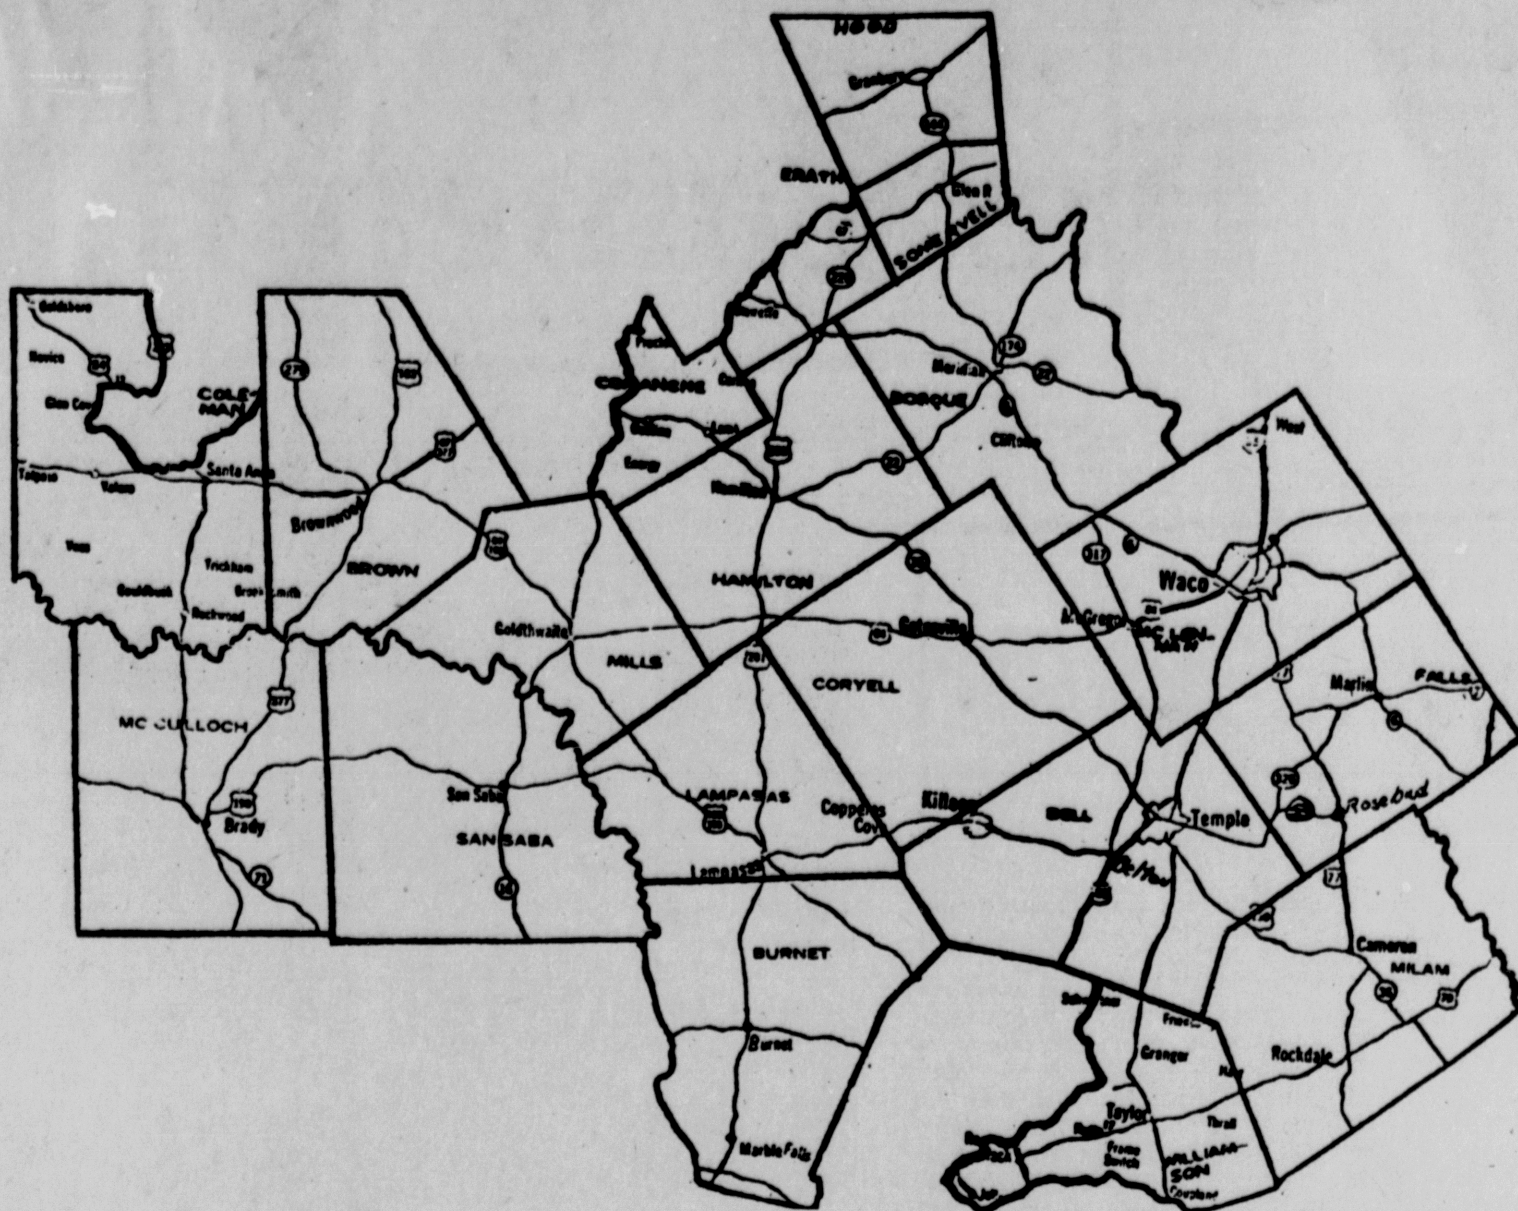

It was a transition of representation from Pickle to Poage which both carried off with aplomb in brief remarks before an estimated crowd of 3,500.

Then younger representatives like Kubiak from Rockdale and Bigham from Temple were introduced and State Sen. Bill Patman, of Ganado, whose district only last year encompassed this part of Central Texas in Williamson, Bell and Milam Counties.

And one of the congressmen mentioned that a new era and new leadership were apparent, not only at the barbecue, but throughout the state and by implication, the country.

Though it was not meant to be so much nostalgia as a friendly introduction, the tenor seemed to be a new era in that part of Central Texas politics.

And perhaps expanding congressional and senatorial districts, widening like circles outward from a grounds soon underwater, support such contention.

11th DISTRICT EXPANDS - The new 11th Congressional District served by Cong. W. R. (Bob) Poage has been expanded to include 19 counties, 15 complete and parts of four others. They include Bell, Bosque, Brown, Burnet, Coryell, Falls, Hamilton, Hood, McCulloch, McLennan, Milam, Mills, San Saba, Somerville, and parts of Coleman, Comanche, Erath, and Williamson. For many years the district consisted of only six counties.

South Vietnam Seeks Legalized Birth Control

By Angela Fathers

SAIGON

Reuter -- One of South Vietnam's most urgent social reforms is to legalize birth control, a controversial issue in a mainly Buddhist country which traditionally believes large families are a sign of prosperity and an insurance in old age.

The question is also complicated by the fact that South Vietnam's largest minority are Catholics.

The average number of children in a Vietnamese family is six. Many families have eight or nine.

President Nguyen Van Thieu, a Catholic who has two children, believes that population control is an important step towards his country's post-war development, officials say.

Social reformers are working to abolish an old French law, implemented here in 1933, which prohibits the sale or advertising of contraceptives. A bill is likely to be introduced through the national assembly within the next two months and legislators say there is a strong possibility that the 1933 law will be revoked this year.

Government policy is reflected in an army directive which announced earlier this year that family allowances would only be paid for four children.

The health ministry has set up 80 family planning clinics in hospitals throughout the country over the last four years despite the old law. They get round it by claiming the centers are "child health clinics" for unhealthy mothers. Many Vietnamese women produce a child every year and the infant mortality rate is high.

Mothers attending the clinics must be married with at least one child and have the consent of their husbands. They are then eligible for supplies of contraceptive pills, intra-uterine devices, or condoms donated to South Vietnam by U.S. aid.

It is a brave start, but due to the total lack of publicity health ministry records show that only 15,000 mothers in South Vietnam are practicing birth control. The population of the country is 18 million.

This does not reflect the overall picture, however. Although the importing of contraceptives is illegal, both U.S. aid and commercial pharmaceutical companies import them as "menstrual regulators."

The South Vietnamese can buy supplies under the counter or at inflated rates on the black market. And large numbers of wealthy Saigonese smuggle in stacks of "the pill" from Hong Kong or Singapore.

Birth control has inevitably taken on faster in the cities than in the country. Abortion is illegal in Vietnam but vasectomy operations done for medical reasons are on the increase.

The biggest stumbling block to the whole issue is the country's scattered and very often illiterate peasant population.

The millions of isolated farmers, in their thatched villages and paddy fields, think of large families in terms of useful labor. Most are Buddhists practicing ancestor worship, who traditionally believe a child is a gift from God and must be received with thanks.

The health ministry's family planning program to date has largely relied on American aid. U. S. aid, which has furnished $500,000 a year for the plan, will be assisting the country for at least another two years.

But if birth control is legalized and pharmaceutical firms begin manufacturing contraceptives, the country's vast population growth will decrease and the South Vietnamese will undoubtedly enjoy a higher standard of living, government officials claim.

Dear Frank:
Congratulations on your purchase of the complete ownership of the Cameron Herald.

I have some other good news for you. Because of your work with the public notice committee of NNA three years ago and our determination to follow up on your idea for a nationwide survey, we voted at the National Newspaper Association Managers meeting in Wyoming last week to do the nationwide survey on public notice advertising.

Since they elected me secretary-treasurer of the Newspaper Association Managers at the meeting, it's going to be part of my job to raise the funds for this.

We have several thousand in our NAM treasury to allocate to this, but we will want to raise more money from individual state associations.

I'd like for you to get your information out of your files on this and present it to the Texas Press Association Board of Directors in October, and we will try to get funds in our budget again for this in 1973-74.

You never know when an idea will wake up again, do you?

Sincerely,
Bill Boykin
Executive Director
Texas Press Association

Dear Frank:

Congratulations on your recent purchase of 100 percent ownership in your fine newspaper. You and your newspaper certainly contribute much to our area, and I appreciate it.

If I can ever be of any service, please let me know. With best regards,

Your friend,
Bill Patman

Lawyers To Assemble In Houston

About 300 lawyers will attend the State Bar of Texas section and committee assembly here Sept. 14-15 at the Joe C. Thompson Center of The University of Texas. Bar executive director H. C. Pittman announced.

The group will honor members of the Constitutional Revision Commission and other state officials with a reception Sept. 14 at 6:30 p.m.

The section and committee assembly is held semi-annually -- in the spring and fall.

A Significant Example...

We urge continued support of Cameron Public Library through Cameron Friends membership.

It continues to be a good thing for a number of reasons:

ONE -- Adds to the cultural atmosphere of the community.

TWO -- Lends support to book purchase programs which over a period of seven years have built book count from 3,000 to well over 10,000 books.

THREE -- Boosts art shows like the exhibit of Texas artists on display through September 27.

Upon examination, people will find the modern fortunes of Cameron and Milam County and the Cameron library are inextricably entwined. It would seem silly to place that much value on one new library building, even when it is getting continued private and public support for books.

But library fundraising techniques convinced one hospital group a major drive here could be completed, which it was. It brought together about three generations of leadership, of diverse backgrounds to accomplish by private, local, state and federal means the construction of that contemporary building.

Those skills became everyday tools in organizing quite a number of viable institutions like a hospital, Folk Fete, Inc., Cameron Industrial Foundation, Inc., urban renewal planning and a host of other lesser projects which came about when needed.

It is seldom that wisdom of a new library is so readily turned to good use in a community, but that is what happened in Cameron.

Cameron Public Library and Cameron Friends maintain a significant example of what intelligent application can do for people and institutions caught up in the vast changes of the '60s and '70s.

For these reasons we consider the Cameron Library as important to modern individual and community development as any element of the community, deserving the considerable support coming its way.

TJC Installs New Telephone System

Beginning Wednesday Temple Junior College will have a new telephone system -- a modern console switchboard that will allow callers to reach anyone and anywhere on campus by dialing 773-9961.

"It will no longer be necessary to use different numbers for different departments," pointed out Percy Francis, TJC business manager. "Anyone calling the college can use the one number, and the switchboard operator will direct the call to the party needed."

He said the new system now has five main trunk lines and is expandable.

Natchez Women Spur Historic Restoration

NATCHEZ, Mississippi
Reuter - The ladies of this historic Mississippi cotton port are credited with spurring an interest in the town's past which has set residents rushing to buy and restore old homes.

The restoration of huge ante-bellum (pre Civil War) mansions begun by a group of women in the 1930s has brought a flourishing tourist trade to this town of 18,000 set on thickly forested cliffs overlooking a curving expanse of the Mississippi River.

But in recent years a new hectic rush has begun to restore not just the big homes but the smaller ones as well.

These attractive little houses in a variety of styles reflecting the nationalities of the towns many rulers - French, Spanish, British, early American - are fetching $85,000 and up.

Dr. George Moss, a local doctor who has bought and restored three of the homes, estimates restoration costs can run as high as three times the cost of building a new house.

Asked why he has gone in for the time-consuming work and expense of restoring one home after another, Dr. Moss explained: "I'm married."

His wife, Mrs. Margaret Moss, is president of Natchez Garden Club, one of the two energetic and competitive womens groups which manages restored homes and organized tours of private homes. The other is the Pilgrimage Garden Club.

The peak of the tourist season is in March and early April when the azaleas and camellias are in bloom around the picturesque houses, many of them with the classical colonnaded porticoes made famous around the world in the film "Gone With the Wind."

Thirty of the larger homes are thrown open for a tour lasting three days although tourists without that much time on their hands can take just part of the tour. At night five smaller houses are opened for a "candlelight tour."

Mrs. Paula Schilling of the Natchez Garden Club says the idea of the tours began in 1932 when Natchez, its cotton trade ruined by the Civil War, was also feeling the effects of the depression.

"Everything was run down," she says. "Most of the houses were still livable but shabby."

The Natchez area on the western boundary of the rebellious Confederate states fell early to the northern armies and did not suffer the destruction of areas like Georgia, Deep inside the Confederacy.

As Natchez was playing host in 1932 to the Mississippi State Garden Club, a group of women decided to dust off some of the historic houses to show them to the town's guests.

From that year on the fortunes of Natchez appeared to mend in step with the increasing popularity of the tours of the homes.

"We ladies like to think the tour had a lot to do with bringing prosperity to this town," Mrs. Schilling said.

And it probably did because a lot of peoples eyes were turned towards Natchez. Industries began coming here in 1940.

It's Legal To Shoot Texas Crow

Is it still legal to shoot crows in Texas?

Yes, according to Parks and Wildlife Department wildlife officials, the crow may be shot if it is committing depredation or about to commit depredation on ornamental or shade trees, agricultural crops, livestock or wildlife.

All the controversy on crow shooting started about a year ago when the U. S. signed a treaty with the Republic of Mexico placing the family corvidae, which includes crows, under federal protection.

Actually, the intent of the agreement was to protect other members of the family which are found in Mexico, but the raucous, common American crow found himself enjoying the unusual leisure of federal protection.

Recent federal guidelines received by the Parks and Wildlife Department give Texas two options on crow hunting.

One provides for a season which treats the crow as a game bird. Such a season would be for a maximum of 120 days and prohibits the hunting of crows during the peak nesting season.

The second option permits the hunting of depredating crows the year round.

Texas is bound to the second option.

Ali Readies For Fights For World Championship

By Charles Ward

TAMPL, Florida
Reuter -- Mohammad Ali says he is just a few fights away from hanging up his gloves and living on a $20,000 a month annuity.

Ali, the one-time Cassius Clay, explained it all while riding in Tampa promoter Keith Lancaster's automobile enroute from the Tampa airport to Ali's guest referring job at Curtis Hixon Hall here recently.

"First I'll beat Ken Norton (in San Diego, Calif., in early September)," said the ex-heavyweight champion of the world.

"Then I'll rest two months, sign a contract with George Foreman for a fight four months later. I'll fight Foreman in Houston, in the Astrodome, and I'll weigh about 210 pounds then. I'll give him a good whippin', then rest three months and sign to meet old Joe Frazier for old times sake. We will fight in the same place in New York, in the same ring where he beat me.

"I'll wipe him out there and then I'll go off some place and won't fight no more. I won't retire. I just won't fight and let the commission figure it out.

"By then I'll have $2 million in the bank. That will give me $20,000 a month interest. I'll use that for me and my wife and my children to travel around and see the world and learn and I'll still be champion."

Ali was dethroned by Joe Frazier a couple of years ago. Later -- last winter -- Frazier was upset and lost his title to George Foreman. Ali in his bid for a new title shot suffered a blow recently when Ken Norton beat him in San Diego and Norton landed a wallop that broke Ali's jaw.

That rematch is set for September and Ali is insisting he'll beat Norton, then Foreman, then Frazier and be the greatest again.

Ali said all this will happen because he's working hard and getting in the same condition he was "back in the days when I beat up Sonny Liston. I'm down to 217 pounds now. I weighed 225 when I fought Norton. I was fat and out of shape and was not saying my prayers and I was eating everything, staying up, drinking five cups of coffee with three bags of sugar in each.

"Now I'm building my body into shape again. I'll go into the Norton fight at about 208 pounds and I'll beat him with just one thing -- dancing and prancing. Just dancing and prancing." And Ali began to shadow box in the automobile and narrated some more.

Ali went through all the rounds with Norton, starting off with the ring announcement: "and in this corner, weighing in at 208 pounds... and that'll scare Norton and start the crowd whispering and looking at each other." Ali whispered and looked at his handler, Angelo Dundee, his ring doctor, Ferdie Pacheco and Lancaster.

Interviewed at the airport Ali was asked "What about Howard Cossell?" that brought up a stage enemy of Mohammad.

"Why you bring that up?" Ali said in mock anger. "Cossell gets paid for being an idiot. What's your excuse?"

Ali waxed poetic with another TV reporter, saying: "I like your show and I like your style, but your cameras so cheap, I won't be back for awhile."

Turning back to his upcoming appearances Ali said "I need to be motivated, I like to win. Against Norton I wasn't."

"I got to be under pressure to fight. I'm a warrior. My middle name is controversy... I have to be hungry. Like now. Now, when I'm going to get him with the dancing and prancing, I'm best when I'm dancing. Like in the Sonny Liston days. Call it the Mohammad Ali dance. This man Norton, he's in trouble."

Six Flags Begins Weekend Operation

Six Flags Over Texas begins its final week of daily operation for the 1973 season.

After Labor Day Six Flags will be open Saturdays and Sundays from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. The weekend schedule will be in effect through December 2.

All the more than 95 rides, shows and attractions at Six Flags will be in full operation for the weekend openings.

Marked changes in landscape will give Six Flags a new look for fall. As cool weather approaches, the addition of more than 7,000 chrysanthemum plants will add a blaze of autumn color to the Park.

Armadillo Numbers Increasing

Other forms of wildlife come and go in Texas, but the Armadillo seems to be holding its own.

In fact, say Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists, the little tank-like mammal is expanding its range.

Biologists' reports from across the state indicate that armadillos are plentiful. About the only places in the state without armadillos are in the Panhandle and the Trans-Pecos. They become more scarce farther west while in the eastern portion of the state biologists report they are quite thick.

In fact, some estimates run as high as 50 armadillos per 100 acres in Brazos and surrounding counties.

The main enemy of the armadillo, biologists say, seems to be the automobile. The little animals are slow and nearsighted. They wander out on the highway frequently and many of them never make it across.

Armadillos may be hunted year-round in Texas, and those who have eaten the meat say it is delicious, tasting somewhere between pork roast and chicken.

Armadillos like to root around for grubs, worms and insects where the ground is soft and relatively free of rocks. Creek bottoms are the best place to look for armadillos, although where they are numerous, they seem to be everywhere you look, according to biologists.

TIPS FOR OUTDOORSMEN

by Vern Sanford

Some anglers save empty cardboard cartons that once contained milk, wash them clean (inside and out), fill them with cold drinking water, and store them in the freezer side of the home refrigerator, overnight.

Next morning, when they get ready to leave on a fishing trip they place a few of the frozen-solid cartons in the iced-down cooler to help keep the food, sodas and other canned or bottled refreshments cold. And, their catch too!

When the ice in the cartons melts, the water is used for drinking purposes, for removing the fish odor from the hands, or for tidying up the boat.

Anglers who prefer to toss their catch into an ice box, instead of putting them on a stringer, usually add a wide rubber band or two around each carton. This, after filling the carton with water and folding the tops down flat and tight, helps to keep the aroma of the fish out of the frozen or melted ice and the resulting drinking water.

Most of the time fishermen take along a couple or more of these cartons of frozen water for each person in the party.

Some anglers who want to keep their catch fresh and pictureable, hence don't want their fish frozen stiff, pack a half dozen or so pint-sized frozen cartons of water in the box and use no other means of icing. Mainly, this is a matter of how warm the weather and how far one is from home.

If home base is some distance away the quart size cartons are utilized.

One of our crappie fishing friends uses a gallon size milk carton for storing his fileted fish. He drops the filets into the big container, fills the carton with water, folds the top down tight and places the gallon of goodies in his deep freeze.

Sure beats wrapping them in foil individually.

Only trouble here is—that's a lot of fish for one meal, unless you have a bunch of hungry youngsters—

Meat Stretching Meals Top Feature These Days

Stretch, extend and substitute are key words consumers should apply to meat items this week.

This advice comes from Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"Shortages in meat cases -- plus higher prices -- dictate restraint in meat buying.

"As a result, consumers rely on making the most efficient use of meat purchases -- satisfying a family's meat hunger isn't easy these days."

The specialist recommended stretching available ground beef with bread, oatmeal, tapioca, ground carrots, mashed potatoes or cooked rice when preparing meatloaf.

"Or, for a delicious, unusual meatloaf, line the bottom of a pan with meat mixture, top with a layer of stuffing and another layer of meat."

Another technique for efficient use involved combining a small quantity of cooked meat with gravy or white sauce. Extend with vegetables -- such as peas and carrots -- and serve over toast, hot biscuits, rice, noodles or mashed potatoes.

"A smaller portion of meat served with pasta, bread, cheese, milk, eggs, yogurt, cottage cheese or cooked legumes provides enough nutrients to meet daily requirements of family members," Mrs. Clyatt emphasized.

This is also a good time to use other protein foods -- such as peanuts, peanut butter, dry beans and peas, rice and macaroni products -- as main dish items, the specialist contended.

"Call on fresh, frozen or canned fish as an economical stand-in for traditional meat," she added.

"Pork remains in short supply -- with what's available priced relatively high. In general, pork shoulder steaks, Boston butt roasts, 1/4 loin cut into chops, liver and canned hams offer the best values."

Despite rising prices, eggs "hold their own" with most other protein foods, Mrs. Clyatt said. "Although in moderate supply, current price levels have tempered demand somewhat."

Turning to fresh fruits she noted that moderate prices accompany heavy nectarine supplies.

"Peach supplies are good, retailing the same to lower. Watermelons remain reasonably priced and in good supply -- with sizes somewhat larger. Plentiful Pecos cantaloupes offer excellent flavor -- so don't miss this taste treat.

"Seedless grapes, plums, prunes, bananas, honeydews, pineapples and pears also are worthy of consideration."

Vegetable prices, however, vary from store to store, the specialist warned.

"Generally, items in best supply at the most reasonable prices include cabbage, carrots, okra, dry yellow onions, squash, cucumbers, corn, cushaws, and rutabagas."

Pastures May Harbour Tetany, Emphysema

Improved, pastures, one of the greatest boons to the beef cattle industry in Texas, sometimes have their drawbacks from the disease standpoint.

Examples are grass tetany and emphysema, says Dr. John C. Reagar of the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory. Both ailments are almost non-existent on unimproved, native pastures.

The toxicologist said tetany, also known as wheat pasture poisoning, grass staggers and green oat tetany, results from low blood magnesium in cattle. Texas weather conditions this year apparently have been ideal for the disease.

"Large numbers of cases were reported to and diagnosed by our laboratory," he pointed out. "The cold, wet weather resulted in low forage production for a long period, then in late winter and early spring, there was rapid forage growth, and tetany followed."

There has been speculation that tetany occurs most often on highly fertilized pastures, but Reagar said that there is no definite correlation between rate of fertilization and tetany incidence. Animals affected most frequently are pregnant or lactating cows.

Tetany symptoms are varied. Many animals are just found dead. They are fine one day and dead the next, the speaker said. Signs include nervousness, incoordination, bad temper, staggering and falling.

Cattle treated with calcium gluconate, magnesium and phosphorus in early stages made rapid recovery, and within an hour, may appear no different from herd mates. If the animal is already in a coma, it's too late.

Reagar emphasized that the best treatment is prevention. Although this is not always easy. Tetany can be prevented by feeding each cow 2 ounces of magnesium oxide per day. It also might be a good idea to keep late pregnancy and early lactating cows off of small grain pastures.

He said emphysema is also known as bovine asthma, fog fever, lung and panters. The malady, which appears on the increase in Texas, is thought to be a type of allergy that brings on pulmonary troubles.

Pastures which have caused this trouble are Madrid clover, Midland Bermuda, common Bermuda, Coastal Bermuda and weedy areas. Moldy corn stubble and a plant in the mint family are suspects.

Symptoms include labored breathing, grunting and mouth breathing. There may be froth around the mouth and nose. Death can result if the disease goes untreated.
